"For we are the same our fathers have been;
We see the same sights our fathers have seen;
We drink the same stream, we feel the same sun,
And we run the same course our fathers have run.

"They loved, but the story we cannot unfold;
They scorned, but the heart of the haughty is cold;
They grieved, but no wail from their slumber will come;
They joyed, but the tongue of their gladness is dumb.

"They died, aye! they died: we things that are now,
Who walk on the turf that lies over their brow,
Who make in their dwellings a transient abode,
Meet the things that they met on their pilgrimage road."

INTRODUCTION.

THE collection and arrangement of the material necessary for the history of an American family, requires an amount of labor far beyond the conception of those who read the results. The early settlers of this continent encountered a life of trial and hardship. Their homes were frequently situated far apart from each other, in an almost unbroken wilderness, and they lived in constant anxiety lest they should not be able to procure food for their families, while the dread of savages and wild beasts ever haunted them. Again, the uncertainty as to the result of their efforts, to make the settlement of a new country successful, must have had a depressing effect upon their minds. It was indeed a severe test of their mental and physical qualities, and it is not strange, with such surroundings they overlooked some very important matters, and especially the preservation of many valuable documents relating to family history. This loss of material, with many other obstacles, combine to make the preparation of a genealogy a work of great difficulty. Yet with all its perplexities, the compiler of this record has found it a pleasant and profitable undertaking. Not only has it broadened his vision as to the qualities required for the settlement of a new country, and deepened his respect for those early pioneers, but it has shown how our common humanity is linked together, and has brought to light much information of a local character, which otherwise would have remained unknown. The gradual development of many of the principles which have become a part of our national life, is brought into view by the uncovering of the hidden springs which underlie the peculiarities of different communities, made up of families possessing such distinctive qualities.

The history here written is of one of the few families in this country which have sprung from a single fountain. All of the name, thus far discovered, can be traced to him who came from England in the year 1635.

From what has been gathered "across the seas" it appears that the name had a Saxon origin. It was in existence very early in the ninth century, and probably derived from the local surroundings of the place where the family lived. By others it is claimed that the first bearing the name was Rogerus or Richard de Olney who came from Normandy with William the Conqueror in the year 1066, and after the conquest of England, with a number of others, became permanent occupants of the soil. This name appears in the Domesday Book, which describes the apportionment of land to the followers of the Conqueror. His Arms are described as follows, viz:

Three piles in a base gu. (red;) on a canton ar. (silver,) a mullet sa. (black;) crest out of a ducal coronet or (gold;) an eagle's head in flames of fire proper, natural colored, in the mouth a sprig of vert (green). Motto, "Silve Probate Leon."

We leave to some future antiquarian the labor of deciding to a certainty the true origin, well satisfied that to be descended from the sturdy stock of Old England, is honor enough, be it Saxon, or Norman, or both.

In the old histories and official documents the name is spelled variously; but the present form is one of the oldest. The following are some of the methods found in this country and England: Olney, Olnea, Ollnea, Oleney, Onley, Oney, Oligney, Oulney, Culney, Colney, and Oneye, while in France are found Auldny and Aulnay.

The prosecution of this work has occupied the leisure hours of its author for a period of more than eight years. He has visited not only those places where the early members of the family first settled, but a large number of western cities and localities. Over forty cemeteries and burial places have been inspected, the records of the towns in Rhode Island have been examined, as have the libraries where genealogical records are stored in this and other states, while as to correspondence, that has been almost unlimited.

It has been our design to condense the various accounts into a close compass, and to avoid if possible any attempt to extend to an unreasonable length the meagre and in many instances the uncertain records, which have come down to us from the past.

It will also be noticed that no effort has been made to follow the female branches beyond one generation from the family name.

The compiler is perfectly aware that many imperfections may be found in this record, yet he trusts it will not prove entirely unsatisfactory. He extends to those of the "name" who have so kindly aided in preparing this collection, his sincere thanks. Great credit is also due to those engaged in similar work, who have rendered assistance in disentangling the threads of family history. Were not the number so large, their names would be recorded here.

We feel, however, constrained to quote the remark of that quaint author of the 17th century, Thomas Fuller, when engaged in writing that wonderfully entertaining work, "The Worthies of England," where the name of Olney frequently occurs, "Here I cannot but condemn the carelessness, not to say ingratitude, of those who can give no better account of the place where their fathers or grandfathers were born, than the child unborn; so that sometimes we have been more beholden to strangers for our instructions herein, than to their nearest kindred. And although some will say, sons are more comfortably concerned to know the time of their father's death, than place of their birth, yet I could almost wish that a moderate fine were imposed on such heirs, whose fathers were born before them, and yet they know not where they were born."

THE FAMILY OF OLNEY IN ENGLAND.

Mr. George W. Olney, of New York, a son of No. 212, contributes the following memoranda concerning the family of Olney in England, gathered from English county histories, ancient pedigrees and other sources:

The orthography of the family name is in a variety of forms in the old histories, official documents and pedigrees. I have found as many as ten variations. The name of the same person or the same place is differently spelled by different authorities. For example, Olney (the present form) in Buckinghamshire, is given in some old books as Oulney, Oldney and Olenaye. The island of Olney in the river Severn, near Gloucester, is not only spelled Olney in the oldest books, but Oleneay and Oldney, and at the present day, the name has been corrupted to Alney. The following are the several variations which I have discovered in the old historical documents:—Olney, Oulney, Ollney, Olney, Olneye, Olnie, Oldney, Oleneye, Oleneay, Oldeney, Oleney, Olnea.

There is no doubt that the family name of Olney, now borne by a prominent family in Essex, is a corruption of the ancient Olney, for the Essex Olneys show the old Olney crest upon their Coat of Arms.

In Collectanea Topographica, Vol. 8, page 300, a catalogue of residents in the county of Warwick in the reign of Queen Elizabeth is given, in which appears this line, "Olney alias Olney." It would seem, therefore, in that day the names were recognized as synonymous.

As to the origin and meaning of the name Olney, I find information that must be accepted as satisfactory and conclusive. It is an Anglo-Saxon, or Old English word, and existed therefore for a long period prior to the Norman Conquest.

According to Flavell Edmunds, in his curious work, *Traces of History in the Names of Places, page 128, the word "Olney" is compounded of the words Oln—from Olan or Holegn, the holly—and Ey, water; in the Anglo-Saxon language. The meaning of the compounded word, therefore, is "holly—water."

In Lombard's Topographical History of England, page 256, the Anglo-Saxon for Olney island in the Severn is given as "Olanize." Camden says of the Anglo-Saxon spelling of the name, (referring to Olney island), "This was Oleaneg in Saxon, instead of Olanize, for so our ancient annals read it." Lombard renders Olanize—Olney-isle,—ize standing for the second of the two words; but the more ancient, and more correct, according to Camden—spelling, Oleaneg has the same signification as Olney, for Olan and Olean are the same, and ag as well as ey, means in the Old English, water.

The word Olney, then, signifying holly-water, it would be interesting to inquire how it came to be applied to a locality. I venture to suggest that a wet or swampy spot where the holly grew with unusual luxuriance, might obtain the name. In reference to the etymology of the word holly, the lexicographer Richardson, under the title of "The holly or holm tree," says, "Skinner suggests that the name hol-egm—the Anglo-Saxon holly—was applied from hal or hol and ege, the edge, i. e., all edge or sharpness (the sharpness or prickleness of the leaves of the holly). Holm, Skinner thinks, may be from the Anglo-Saxon holm, a river island, because these trees flourish in moist or watery places. It is not improbably corrupted from holen, holn, and by change of n into m—holm." As the ancient Olney near Gloucester was a river island, their connection between the name and the idea will be observed.

There were three places in England which, prior to the Norman Conquest, bore the name of Olney.

1st. Olney island, in the river Severn, half a mile from the town of Gloucester. It is mentioned in all the ancient histories as the spot selected by the Saxon king, Edmund Ironsides, and the Danish king, Canute, about A. D. 1016, to decide by single combat the sovereignty of the realm of England. The duel, according to tradition, was of long duration, and neither contestant being able to overcome the other, it was resolved between them that they should divide the land. On the modern maps the place is called Alney. Lombard says, quaintly, "I find no other things of this isle savinge that Bale writeth that Joannes Olney, a Charterhouse Monke, in the reign of Edward III which wrote a few, fonde miracles, was born within the same."

2nd. Olney in Warwickshire. It is on the old maps as a suburb or outpost of the town of Coventry. Dugdale's History of Warwickshire, page 128, says, "Of this place there is now no memorial left but a double moat which beareth the name." West's history of the same county says, page 785, "Olney was formerly a village in the neighborhood of Coventry, now depopulated. It had little in Dugdale's time to show its early condition and existence." This place evidently existed before the Norman Conquest, for it is mentioned in the Chronica Saxonica as Olanize. It may have given its name to that family of Olney from which sprang the Lord Mayor of London in 1446, for, according to Stowe, in The New Survey of London, this John Olney, the Lord Mayor, was son of John Olney of the City of Coventrie."

3rd. Olney, a market town in the north part of Buckinghamshire, on the border of Northamptonshire. This place appears to have existed from the earliest Saxon times. It has a present population of more than 2,000 souls, and is noted for its lace manufactories. The poet Cowper resided there many years and his descriptions of rural scenes were drawn from the neighborhood. About two miles from Olney is the manor of Weston-Underwood. Here, in the reign of Edward III, resided John Olney, mentioned by Timbs as "the founder of the church at Olney." His grand-daughter married into the family of Throckmorton, and the manor passed to them and is held by them to this day. Cowper removed from Olney to Weston-Underwood and died there.

At the time of the Conquest surnames were not in general use either among the Saxons or Normans. There were many among the higher nobility even, who possessed but Christian names. When the Conqueror portioned out the lands among his followers, many of them assumed as family names, the names of the estates of which they had become possessed. It was as late as the 13th century before the custom of taking surnames had become common. It is proper to presume, therefore, that the first persons who bore the name of Olney, obtained it from one of the three places so called, then existing in England. Whether these persons were Normans or Saxons must always remain undecided. Roger de Olnie, whose name is inscribed in the Conqueror's Domesday Book, as an undertenant in Buckinghamshire, was probably a Norman, for the name Roger is of French, not Teutonic origin.

It may be asserted with safety, that the early Olneys, whose names appear in the chronicles of England for the first few centuries after the Conquest, were not descended from a common ancestor, still they were not a prolific family there, and as none of them appear to have resided outside of a group of adjacent counties, composed of Buckingham, Gloucester, Northampton, Warwick and Middlesex, (London), the families in existence from the time of the early records down to the present, could not have been derived from more than half a score of founders, if as many.

In the following list of individuals bearing the name of Olney which I have collected from the English county histories and family pedigrees in the Astor Library, New York, it will be seen that a connection between some of the earlier and later Olneys can be very readily presumed, though the actual links are wanting.

This list is made to the time of Charles I., from the Norman Conquest.

A. D.

1086. Roger de Olnie. His name occurs in the Domesday Book for Buckinghamshire, as an undertenant.
1240. Henricus de Olneye. Incumbent of the church of St. Nicholas, Eydon, Northamptonshire. Bridge's Northampton, Vol. 1, page 123.
1302. William de Olneye and Raf. (Ralph) Olneye, named in documents relating to the county of Buckingham, in Rolls of Parliament, 30 Edward I.
- 1308-14. Sire John de Olneye. His name appears twice in "The Roll of Arms of the Reign of Edward II. (in the Cottonian Library) under the caption of Buckinghamshire."
1319. John de Olney. Member of Parliament from Leicestershire, 12th Edward II. Nichols' Leicester Vol. 1, page 454. This is probably the same as the preceding Olney, the Sheriff.
1325. Johannes de Olney. This name appears in a "Catalogue of Knights and Principal Persons of the County of Leicester living in the Latter End of the Reign of King Edward II."—Nichols' History of Leicester, Vol. 1, page XLV. Probably this Johannes or John is identical with the Sheriff and member of Parliament preceding.
1345. (About). John Olnie (as written by Hollinshed) Joannes Olney (as written by Bale and Lombard) a Charterhouse Monk born on the island of Olney in the river Severn, and flourished in the reign of Edward III. Hollinshed says, (Vol. 2, page 710, and Vol. 3, page 213), "He was one of the literati of that age." Lombard says, "I find no other thing of this isle (Olney) savinge that Bale writeth that Joannes Olney, a Charterhouse Monke in the reign of Edward III., which wrote a few, fonde miracles, was borne within the same."

1349. Simon de Olney, prebendary of the chapel or hermitage of St. Nicholas, Grafton, Northampton. Bridge's Northampton, Vol. 1, page 302.
1364. Simon Olneye, prebendary of the church of St. James; Parestis-Perry, Northampton. Bridge's Northampton, Vol. 1, page 313. This probably the same as the last.
1377. John de Olney. In the fiftieth year of the reign of Edward III., Giles de St. John released to John de Olney, citizen and merchant of London, all his right to the manor of Middleton-Chendint, Northampton. Bridge's Northampton, Vol. 1, page 185.
1378. John de Olney, Sheriff of Buckinghamshire and Bedford. His seat was at Weston-Underwood, near Olney, Bucks. Willis' Buckinghamshire, page 10. Tymms, in the Family Topographer, Vol. 3, page 50, mentions this John Olney among the "Eminent natives of Buckinghamshire" and a founder of Weston Church, Weston-Underwood, and says that he died in 1395.
1393. John Olney of Buckinghamshire. Receiver General of William Beauchamp, son of the Earl of Warwick. Dugdale in History of Warwickshire, records that "The manor of Birdingsly was granted 16th Richard II. to William Beauchamp, son of T. Beauchamp, Earl Warwick, to John Olney, Receiver General of all his lands in consideration of his good and faithful service, to hold during life, which John, (then Lord of Weston-Underwood, in county Bucks), was in 2d Henry IV., 1402, certified to hold half a Knight's fee in this place of the Earl of Warwick. It seems that the inheritance of it was afterwards granted to the same John, for Margaret, the daughter and heiress of Robert Olney, son of the said John, being wedded to Thomas Throgmorton, brought it to that family."
- 1420-53. Robert Olney, son of the preceding Lord of Weston-Underwood, in Bucks. He appears to have been a patron of the church of St. Leonard, Birdingbury,

- Warwickshire, in 1443. He was sheriff of Buckinghamshire in 1453. In Burke's Peerage and Baronetage, he is termed "Sir Robert Olney, Knight of Weston," in the article on the family of Throckmorton.
1434. Margeria Olney de Weston-Underwood, Bucks, daughter of the preceding, a patron of St. Leonards, Birdingby, from 1434 to 1441. Dugdale's History of Warwickshire. She married Thomas Throgmorton, and through her the manor of Weston-Underwood passed into the family of Throckmorton, which now possesses it.
- 1432-46. Sir John Olney. Sheriff of London in 1432, Lord Mayor, 1446, (25th Henry VI). Stowe's Survey of London says that he was a mercer and was "sonne of John Olney of the city of Coventrie, Warwickshire." He was buried in St. Michael's Church, Crooked Lane, London, and there was a monument to him. The church was burned in the great fire of 1666, and this memorial was destroyed.
1448. Robert Olney owned the manor of Gilsburgh in Northamptonshire in this year. Bridge's Northampton, Vol. 1, page 537. He was sheriff of Northamptonshire in 1459, and may be the same as the preceding Robert.
- 1485-1509. John Onley, County Salop, born in the reign of King Henry VII., is mentioned in the pedigree of Onley of Catesby, given in Baker's Northampton, Vol. 1, page 287, as the great-grandfather of Sir Edward Onley, who died in 1638.
- 1509-47. Sir William Olneye, Knight. The record of his burial at Chacombe Priory, County Northampton, appears in a list written by a herald in the reign of Henry VIII. Collectanea Topographica, Vol. 2, page 389.
- 15—. Robert Oleney, Esquire, buried in the Charterhouse of London. Recorded by Robert Aske, in his collection, Temp. Henry VIII. It is not certain that these burials were made in the time of Henry VIII. The lists were written then, but the burials may have taken place much earlier.

1534. John Oneley is mentioned in Nichols' Leicestershire, Vol. 2, page 316, as Vicar of the Church of St. Egelwin the martyr at Scaford.
1550. Thomas Olney, reign of King Edward VI. His daughter Maria married Robert, son of Sir Edward Goring, of Burton, Sussex. The said Robert was one of the gentlemen of the King's Privy Chamber. No other mention of this Thomas Olney.
- 1577-78. Thomas Oldeney of Tackebroke. —Onley alias Olney (Verbatim). These names appear in the Catalogue of Residents of the County of Warwick, being the years 1577-78, "also in list of Lords, Knights and Gentlemen." Collectanea Typographica, Vol. 8, page 300.
1635. Thomas Olney, who came to America in 1635 from St. Albans.

NOTE. In "Gleanings from English Records about New England families," by James A. Emmeston and Henry F. Waters, published by the Essex Institute, there is a record of a will, made in 1615, by Robert Longe of Leeton, Bedford County, England, by which he gives to a relative $5\frac{1}{2}$ acres of land, purchased of Thomas Olney.

This may have been the father of the Thomas Olney who came to America in 1635. (J. H. O.)

GENEALOGY.

No. 1.

THOMAS' OLNEY, the ancestor of the Olneys in America, had his birthplace in the city of Hertford, Hertfordshire, England; which city formed a part of the Parish of St. Albans, the seat of one of the most ancient monasteries, and long celebrated in English history as the center of spiritual influence. Of his early life we know nothing. He received a "Permit to emigrate to New England," April 2, 1635, and came to Salem, Mass., by the ship Planter. He was appointed a surveyor in January, 1636, and granted forty acres of land at Jeffrey Creek, now known as Manchester, near Salem. He was made a freeman the same year, and early associated with those who accepted the peculiar views of Roger Williams. With a number of others he was excluded from the Colony, March 12, 1638. Previous to this, however, in company with Williams, he visited Narragansett Bay while seeking some place where they might live outside the jurisdiction of Massachusetts Colony, and had decided upon the west side of the Seekonk River. Accordingly, with eleven others, they formed a new settlement at the head of the bay which they named Providence, in grateful remembrance of their deliverance from their enemies. They thus became the "Original Thirteen Proprietors of Providence," having purchased their rights from the Indians. In July, 1639, he and his wife and their companions were excluded from the church at Salem, "because they wholly refused to hear the church, denying it, and were re-baptized."

His prominence in the Colony is shown by the various duties he was called to perform.

In 1638 he was chosen the first Treasurer.

In 1647 he was chosen commissioner to form a Town Government.

In 1648 he was chosen assistant for Providence, and held the office almost continuously until 1663.

In 1655, with Roger Williams and Thomas Harris, he was chosen a judge of the Justices Court.

In 1656, he was chosen to treat with Massachusetts Bay about the Pawtuxet lands.

In 1663 his name appears among the grantees of the Royal Charter of Charles II.

In the same year he was chosen an assistant under the new Charter.

He was one of the founders of the First Baptist Church in Providence, and at one time the acting pastor or minister. He was the leader in a schism in the church upon the question of the "laying on of hands," about 1652-4.

He was evidently a man of stern and decided opinions, who did not hesitate to advance his views among his neighbors. Of him, in his occupation as surveyor, it is said, "as he entered upon the surrounding lands with his field book, chain and compass, and mystic words, with the peculiar dignity of official characters of that day, he may well have inspired the Indians with profound awe, and led them to feel that no Indian could henceforth dwell upon that part of their tribal property again."

His homestead was located on North Main street, a short distance south of the State House, and what is now known as Arsenal Lane led through his land. The place of his burial was in the family ground at the rear of his dwelling. All that remained of the earlier members of the family was probably removed to the burial ground on Olney street, from whence a second removal took place to make room for the church now occupying the spot. He was the possessor of a large real and personal estate and occupied one of the better houses in the Plantations.

He was born in the year 1600; married in 1631 to Marie Small, and died in 1682. His children, as follows:

2. I. Thomas², b. 1632, in England.
3. II. Epenetus², b. 1634, in England.

No. 2.

THOMAS³ (*Thomas*¹). He came from England with his parents when a small child, and quite early in life became a leading spirit in the Rhode Island Colony, and was constantly engaged to the time of his death in public affairs.

He was chosen Assistant during the years 1669, '70, '77 to '79. For thirty years he was a member of the Town Council, and frequently we find his name among the members of the Colonial Assembly. His signature occurs through a long term of years as Town Clerk. He was ordained a minister in 1668, and succeeded the Rev. Gregory Dexter as pastor to the First Baptist Church, serving until about the years 1710 to 1715.

He was an earnest opponent of George Fox, a leading Quaker, who came from England and resided some years in the Colony. He very severely criticised his methods and teachings in a document entitled "Ambition Anatomized," the original of which may be seen at the R. I. Historical Society. His home was near where the works of the American Screw Co. are now located at the North End, at the foot of Stampers Hill. He was an owner of a very large tract of land known as the Wenscot Farm, lying in those parts of Providence, now forming a portion of North Providence and Lincoln, considerable of which still remains in the possession of his descendants.

He was born in 1632, married Elizabeth March of Newport, July 3, 1660, and died June 11, 1722. His children, as follows:

6. I. Thomas³, b. May 7, 1661.
7. II. William³, b. June 25, 1663.
8. III. Elizabeth³, b. January 30, 1666.
9. IV. Anne³, b. January 13, 1668.
- V. Phebe³, b. September 15, 1675, at Newport. Not married.

No. 3.

EPENETUS³ (*Thomas*¹). He was born in England, in 1634, and probably less than a year old when brought to this country. He married Mary, a daughter of John Whipple, March 9, 1666, and died June 3, 1698. Though not as prominent in public matters as his older brother, yet we find him an active member of the little Colony and taking a part in the administration of its affairs, serving as a member of the Colonial Assembly and of the Town Council.

His children, as follows:

10. I. Mary³, b. July 13, 1668.
11. II. James³, b. November 9, 1670.
- III. Sarah³, b. September 10, 1672; m. Nathan Waterman.

STEPHEN^o (Joseph⁵, Thomas⁴, Thomas³, Thomas², Thomas¹).
 Born Oct. 12, 1755; married Dorcas Smith, March 30, 1777, and died Nov. 23, 1832. He was among the first to respond to the call for the defense of his country against British oppression, and enlisted in the army when but twenty years of age. He was chosen serjeant of his company, and rapidly rose to the position of captain. He served throughout the war and was present in many battles, among which were Long Island, White Plains, Monmouth, Springfield, Red Bank and Yorktown. He was in the division of Gen. Lafayette, and had so gained his esteem for coolness and bravery that he was chosen to lead the attacking column at Yorktown. Moving at the head of his company, in the early morning, he completely surprised the British in their redoubt, who were at breakfast. He at once leaped down upon their table, his men immediately following him, and the redoubt was soon taken. He was, however, severely wounded, from the effects of which he never fully recovered. He afterwards retired to his ancestral home in North Providence, where he resided until his death. He was not allowed to remain long in retirement, but was repeatedly called to positions of trust and honor. For many years he was a member of the Town Council and State Assembly. He also surveyed several of the Turnpike roads in the State. His farm of 500 or more acres was largely under cultivation, and the product of his orchards was enormous, from which during some years over 300 barrels of cider were manufactured. He was an earnest politician of the old Federal school, and many anecdotes are told illustrating the peculiar traits of his character. The friendship existing between Gen. Lafayette and himself was clearly exhibited when the former made his last visit to America, in 1824. "He came to Providence, and as he was ascending the steps of

GEORGE W.⁷, (Stephen⁶, Joseph⁶, Thomas⁶, Thomas⁶, Thomas⁶)

Thomas¹). Born April 25, 1789; married Olive Bartlett, of Williamstown, Mass., July 2, 1833; died April 15, 1880, in Charleston, S. C.

At the time of his birth news had just been received of the arrival of Gen. Washington at New York to be inaugurated as the first President of the United States; and Capt. Olney signaled the event by conferring on his son the name of his old commander. His childhood and early manhood were passed upon his father's farm in North Providence, and it was during this period, with other members of the family, he assisted in raising the fortifications below Providence for defence against the British. After the war of 1812-15 he made several business ventures to the Southern ports which led him to think so favorably of Charleston, S. C., that he made it his permanent home. Here for nearly sixty years he was an active merchant, having extended relations with all parts of South Carolina and prominent Northern ports. His long business life, characterized by uprightness, enterprise and intelligence, brought him an ample fortune, which, however, was greatly impaired by the civil war. He died in his ninety-first year, his mental and physical vigor remaining unimpaired almost to the day of his death. His children, as follows:

- I. George W², b. June 2, 1834; d. June 16, 1834.
- II. George W², b. June 5, 1835. He graduated from the law department of Harvard University in 1855, receiving the degree of LL.B. He did not however seek admission to the bar, but chose the career of journalism, purchasing an interest in the business and becoming one of the proprietors and editors of the New York Daily Day Book, 1858-63. He was, during the civil war, on the editorial staff, first of the Richmond Enquirer, and afterwards of the Charlestown Courier. He was on the editorial staff of the New York World 1868-76, editor of the Spectator, of New York, an insurance journal, 1873-76, and managing editor of The Weekly Underwriter, of New York, 1878 to —.
439. III. Hiram B², b. Feb. 2, 1837.

DAVID A.¹, (Stephen², Joseph², Thomas², Thomas², Thomas², Thomas²). Born March 27, 1798. The second President was inaugurated this year and in commemoration of this event the middle name of Adams was given to this son. He married Elizabeth Tew Deane, of Berkley, Mass., Oct. 26, 1826. He commenced a long life of activity at the early age of 18 by teaching, first in his native town of North Providence, and afterwards in the States of Ohio and Maine. About the year 1822 his attention was called to cotton spinning, then somewhat in its infancy in this country, and he engaged in its manufacture until 1840, pursuing the same in Providence, R. I., Fall River, Mass., and Walden, N. Y. The continued depression in business led to his retirement, and for a period of forty years he was connected with a firm in Fall River engaged in the making of cotton machinery. His prudent living gave him the blessing of a long life almost entirely uninterrupted by bodily infirmity, and he fully retained his mental faculties to the day of his death, which occurred April 23, 1885, at the age of over 87 years. He was an upright citizen, an advocate of moral and political reform, and for over fifty years a member of the Christian Church. His children, as follows:

No. 8.

A VIRGINIA FAMILY WHO GENERALLY SPELL THEIR NAME ONEY.

From correspondence with various branches of this family, who live widely apart and are unacquainted with each other, I have gathered information of such a character, as to fully warrant the probability, that the family was of Rhode Island origin. All seem to agree to one Benjamin as the first of the name in Virginia, and that he came from the State of New York during the early part of the struggle for Independence, and settled in Shenandoah Valley. He was without doubt a loyalist and this circumstance led to his removal from New York. He received a captain's commission from Lord Cornwallis, and after the latter's defeat and surrender at Yorktown, he considered his own safety and taking his family he found a home in Tazewell County, then a region far away from any danger on account of his Toryism. In the course of time the family adopted a form of spelling the name in accordance with their manner of pronunciation. An old tradition exists among the different branches of the family, to the effect that formerly there was an I. in their name.

In Staples' "Annals of Providence, R. I.," there is a Benjamin Olney mentioned in 1757, among those who enlisted to go to the French War in Canada. They however, were not sent. In 1760 a Benjamin Olney was made a freeman. From this point no further trace of him is found in Rhode Island, but, about this time a large emigration commenced to New York State and probably this Benjamin was one of the number. To which branch of the family in Rhode Island he may have belonged it is not possible to determine, but there is an uncertain record that No. 37, had a son of that name, and this may be the one. If this view is correct, then this Benjamin must have been of the fifth generation, and his descendants are as follows:

92 A BENJAMIN.⁶ Born about 1735-40, probably in Providence, R. I., married Jemima (Norris?).
